- Working Professionals: Professionals who want to expand their network, stay up-to-date in their field, and establish larger professional relationships.
- Entrepreneurs and business owners: Those looking to use LinkedIn to promote their companies, establish business connections, and recruit staff.
- University students and recent graduates: Students who have recently graduated from their university career who wish to build a work history and gain experience both in internships and in jobs in an area and interest.

5. Application introduction

Welcome to the user manual of the "LinkedIn" application, it is a complete and accessible guide to explore and understand all the features of this professional networking platform. Today, traversing a digital network, LinkedIn has become an indispensable tool for establishing connections, searching for jobs, and promoting businesses effectively.

LinkedIn offers a platform that allows users of all levels of experience and sectors from different industries to make the most of it to achieve their goal. Whether you're looking for job opportunities, expanding your network, or promoting your personal brand, LinkedIn provides the tools and resources necessary to achieve your career goals and aspirations.

It covers everything from the initial setup of your profile to advanced use of the search and networking features. With clear explanations and illustrative screenshots to guide you through creating an impactful professional profile, searching for a job or talent, participating in relevant groups and events, and much more.

This manual will provide you with the guidance you need to make the most of LinkedIn effectively and efficiently whether you are a beginner or an expert on this network.

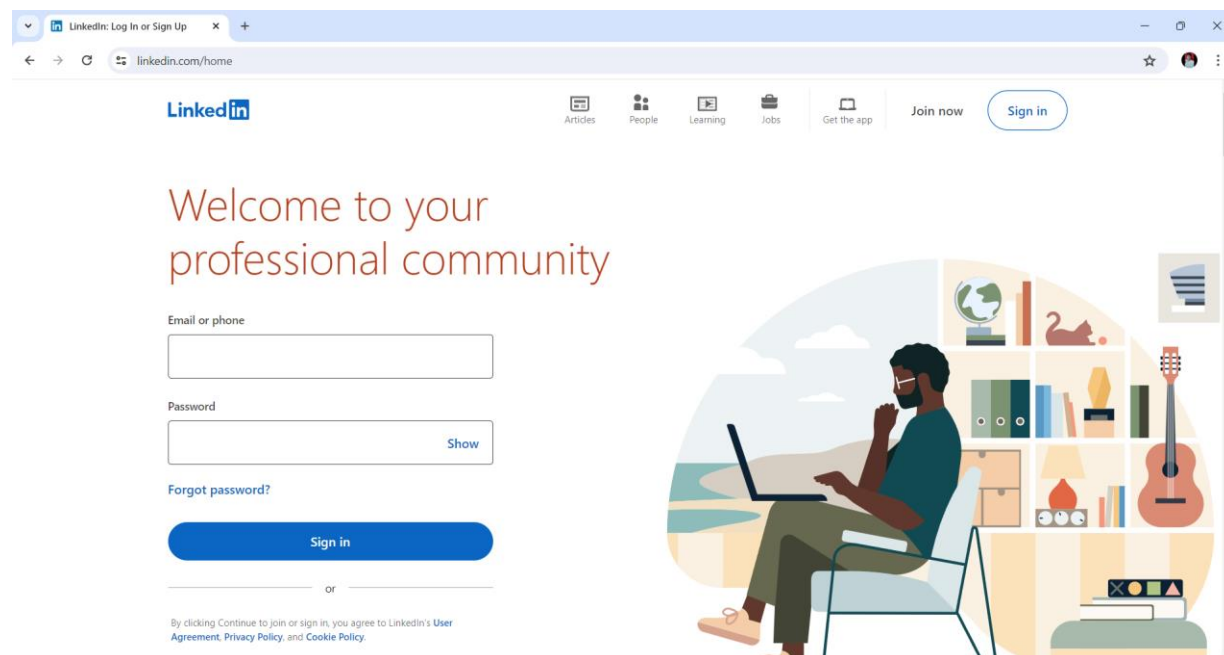

6. Basic notions

1. Professional Network: LinkedIn is a professional social network designed to connect professionals from different sectors and areas in order to facilitate job opportunities, networking and professional development.
2. Professional profile: The LinkedIn profile is equivalent to a digital resume, where users show their work experience, education, skills and professional achievements.
3. Connections: Connections on LinkedIn are people who have connected with each other on the platform. These connections may include friends, classmates, recruiters, and other people relevant to a user's professional network.
4. Groups: Groups on LinkedIn are virtual communities where members share common professional interests, discuss relevant topics, and establish relationships within their industry or field of work.
5. Jobs and Recruitment: LinkedIn offers a dedicated job search section, where users can explore job opportunities, apply for open positions, and connect with recruiters and companies.
6. Direct messages: Direct messages on LinkedIn are a form of private communication between users. Users can send direct messages to their connections to make professional contacts, inquire about job opportunities, or start conversations.
7. Status and Content Updates: Users can share status updates, a short post on their wall to let their network know what they're doing at the moment, as well as content on LinkedIn to stay visible and share news, professional achievements, relevant articles and other related information. with your field or industry.

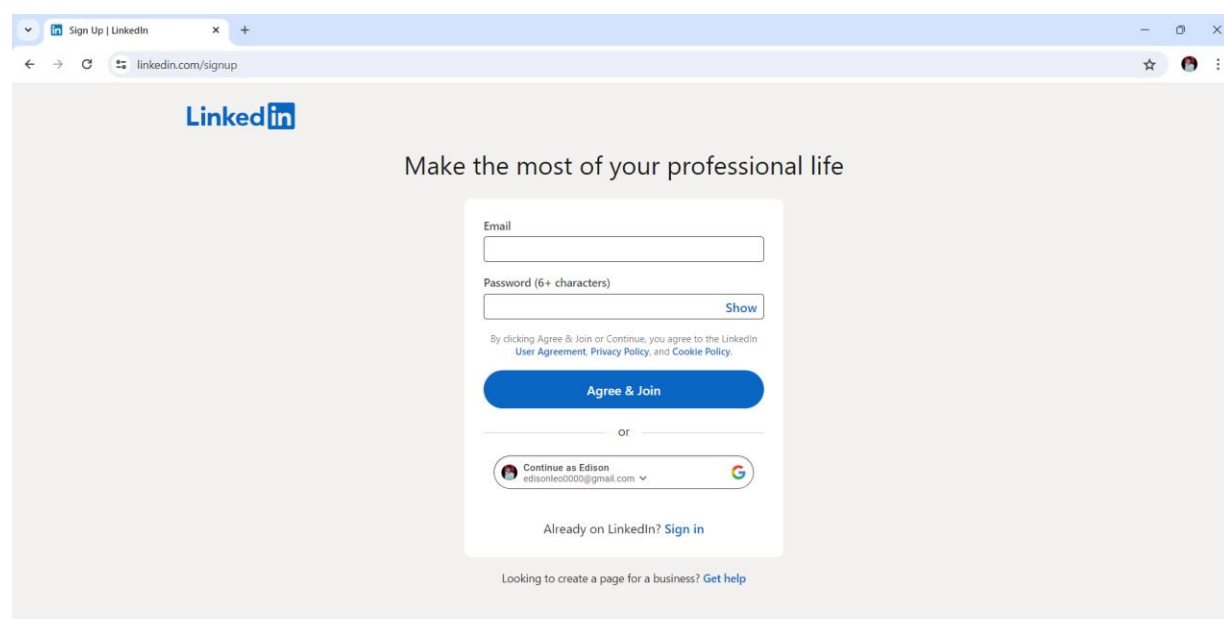

7. Steps to follow

Introduction to LinkedIn (1st Video)

LinkedIn is a professional social network where people can connect, share information and search for job opportunities. It's like an online version of your resume, where you can show your work experience, education, and skills. In addition to connecting with colleagues and friends, LinkedIn allows you to explore jobs, join professional interest groups, and learn from others in your industry. It is a powerful tool to build your professional network and advance your career.

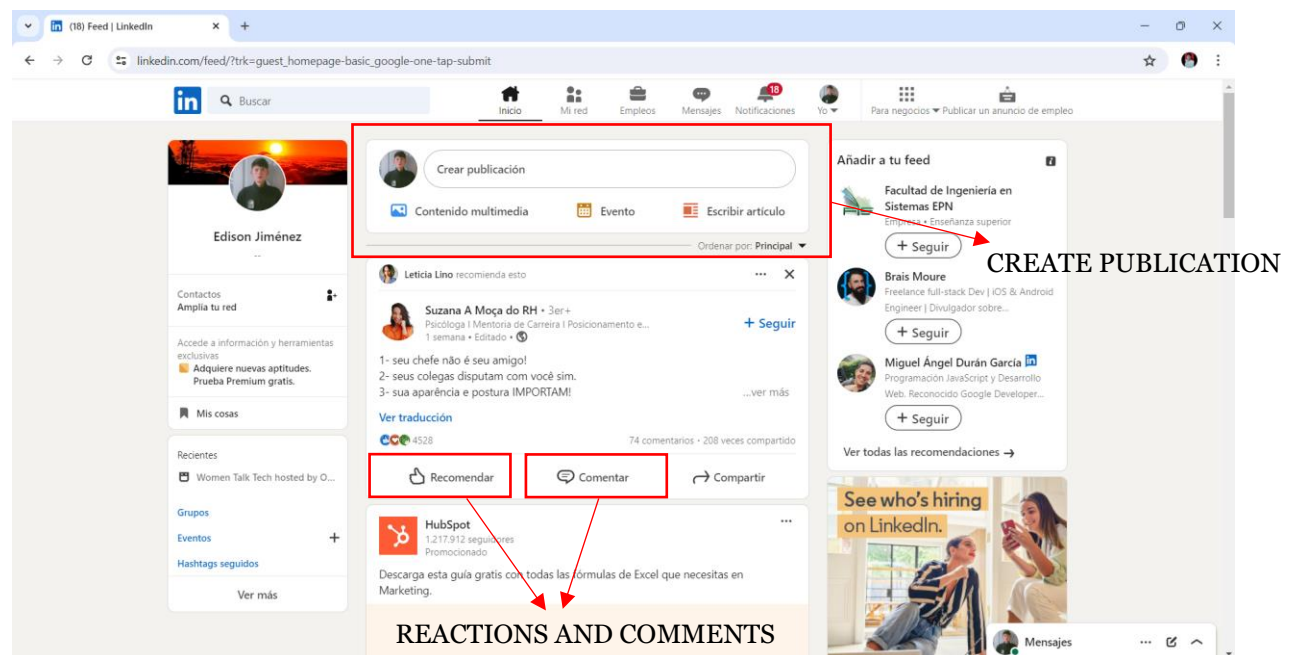

In LinkedIn it is necessary to log in with your own LinkedIn account or also through a Google account. If you want to create a specific account for LinkedIn, you must enter an email and a 6-character password.

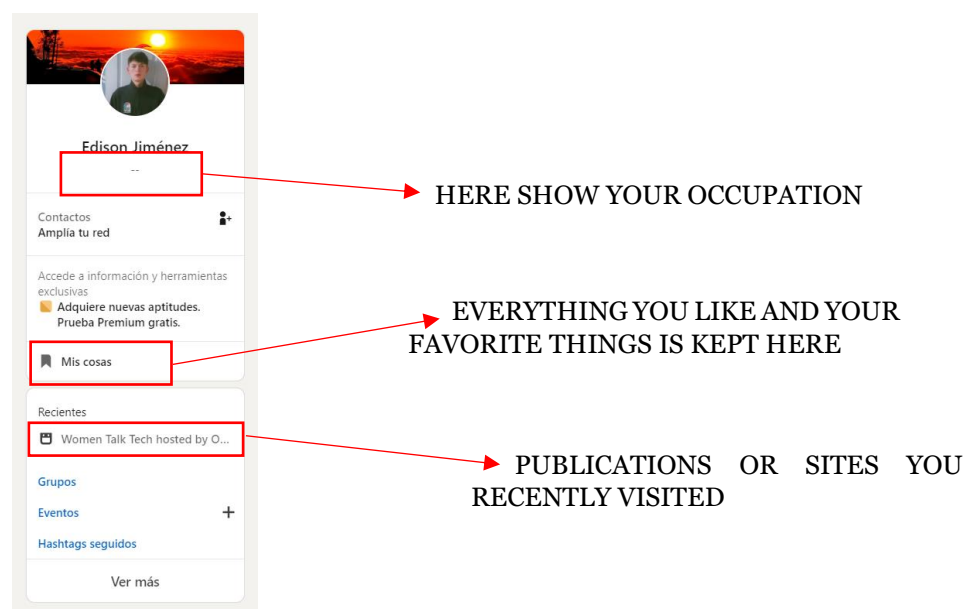

How to create a post on LinkedIn? and exploration of the main LinkedIn wall (2nd Video)

The main wall of LinkedIn is very similar to the social network “Facebook”, which is why you look at the top to create a publication, an event or an article. In the publications made by your contacts or the people you follow, you can react, make positive comments or share or send it directly to other people.

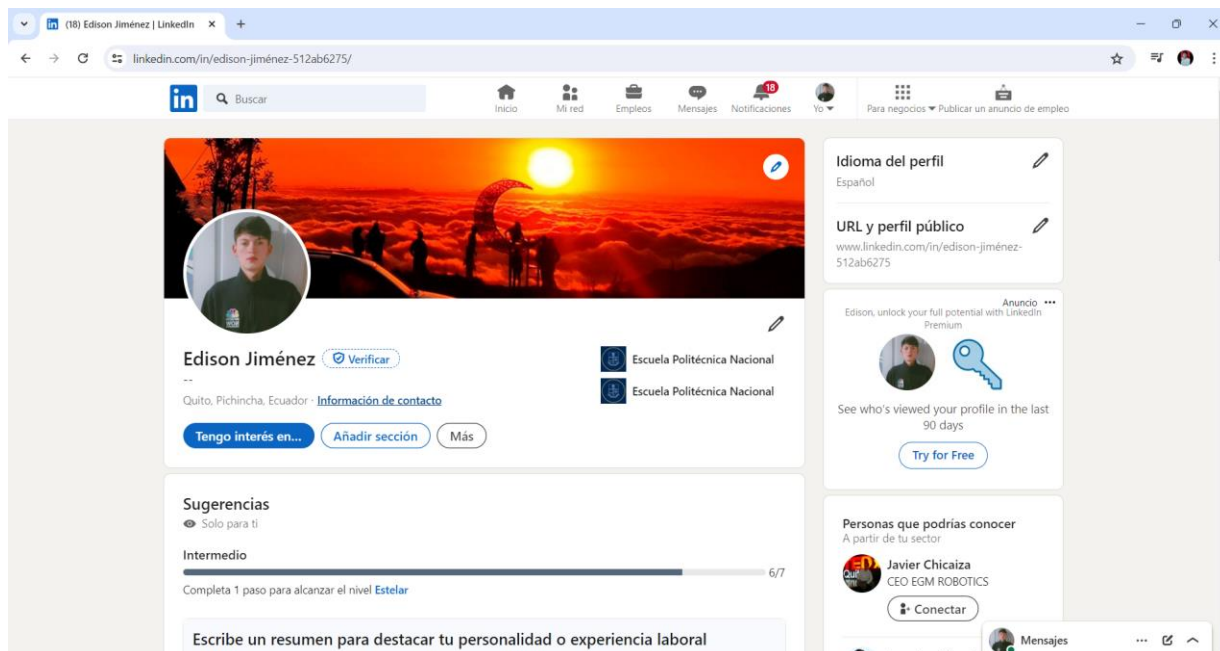

On the left side a small summary of our profile is shown, the number of contacts is shown, how many people have seen your profile in a period of the last 15 days, everything you have saved, both profiles, jobs, publications, among others. . Also shortcuts to the Groups and Events of which you are part, to the Hashtags you follow, etc.

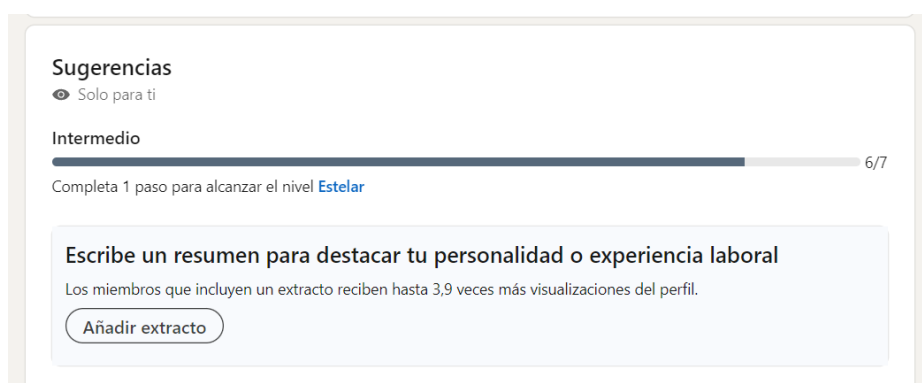

How to set up a LinkedIn profile? (3rd Video)

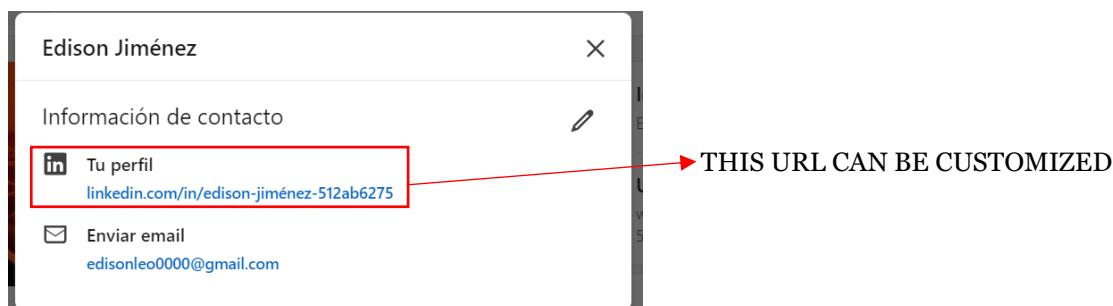

Setting up your LinkedIn profile is important to maximize the professional impact you want to have on the platform. It is recommended that you begin by completing each section with relevant and up-to-date information, including work experience, education, skills, and professional summary. You should make sure to use a professional profile photo and a cover that reflects your personal brand or professional field.

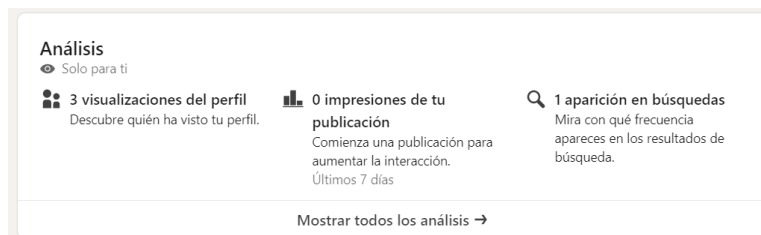

It is recommended to write a concise but impactful summary that highlights your unique skills, achievements and values as a professional. Examples such as: Summary of experience, Skills and competencies, Professional objectives, Describe what distinguishes you from other professionals in the same field, among other aspects.

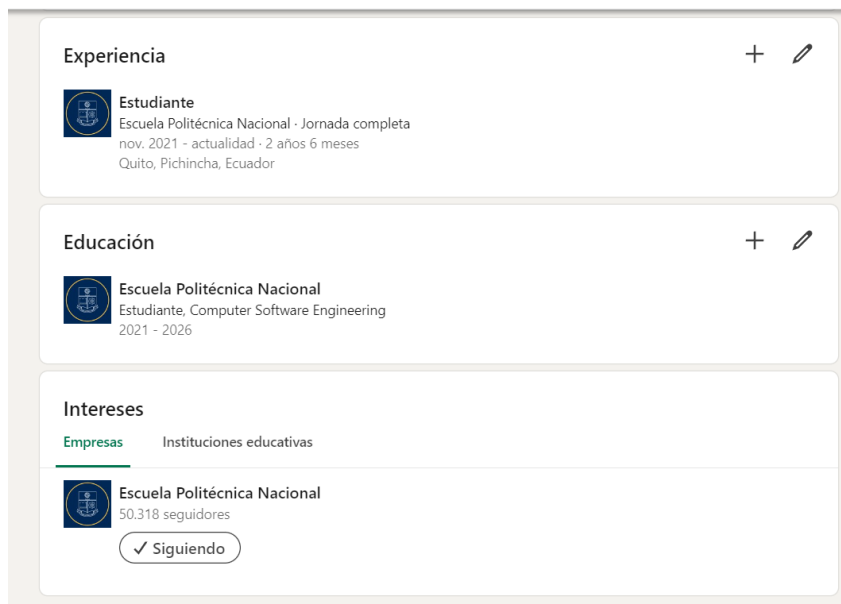

Another option is to customize the public URL to make it easy to remember and share.

In “Analysis” you can observe and obtain a variety of information about the account activity, as well as see who has visited the profile, how many interactions the account has received, number of recommendations, views on each publication, etc. All this helps to keep track of the account and see where it can be improved.

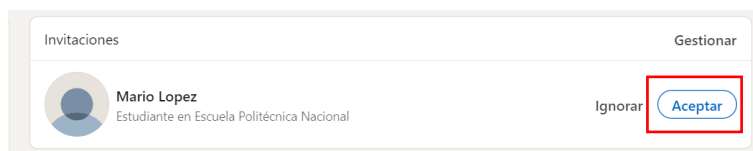

The final part shows the previously entered information of Interests, Education and Work Experience.

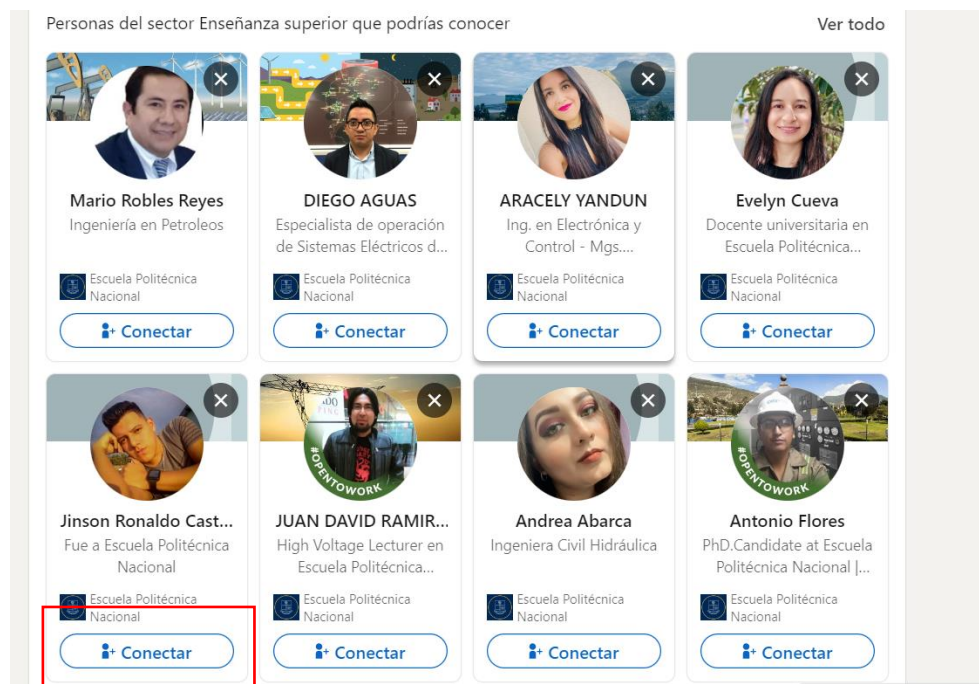

Networking on LinkedIn (4th Video)

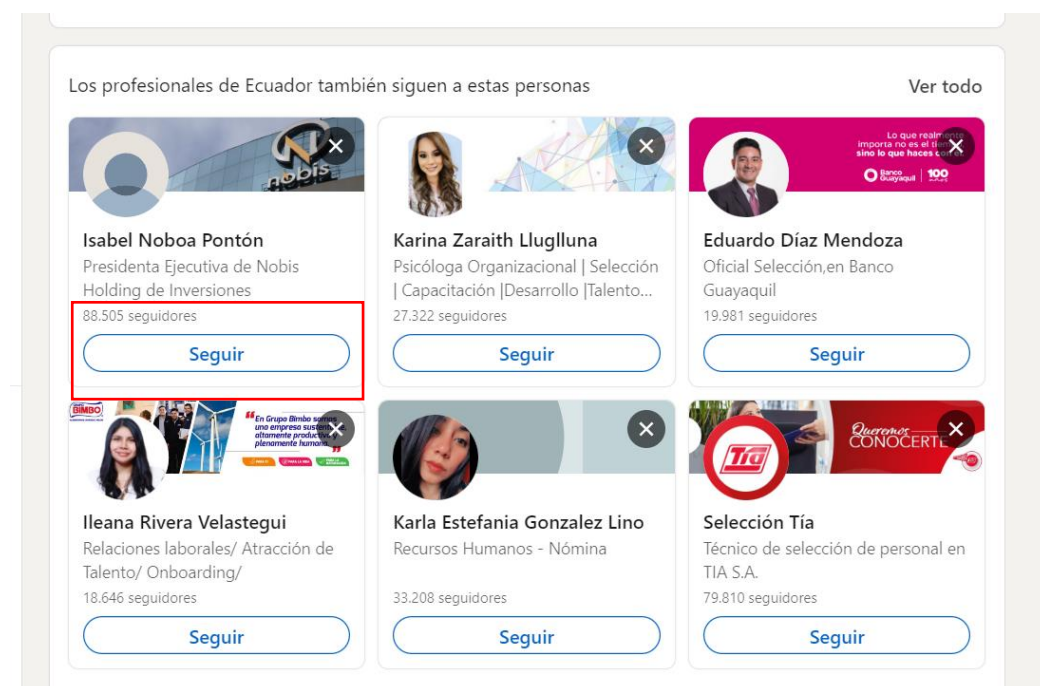

The “My Network” tab screen shows invitations from other people who want to connect with you, you can reject or accept said request.

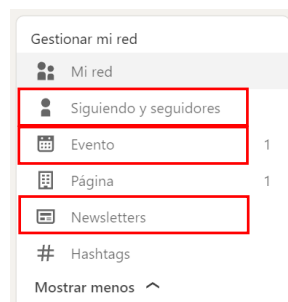

It also shows suggestions of people who may belong to the same area or have similar interests, you can send a request by clicking on “Connect”.

You can also follow pages of companies or people by clicking on “Follow”

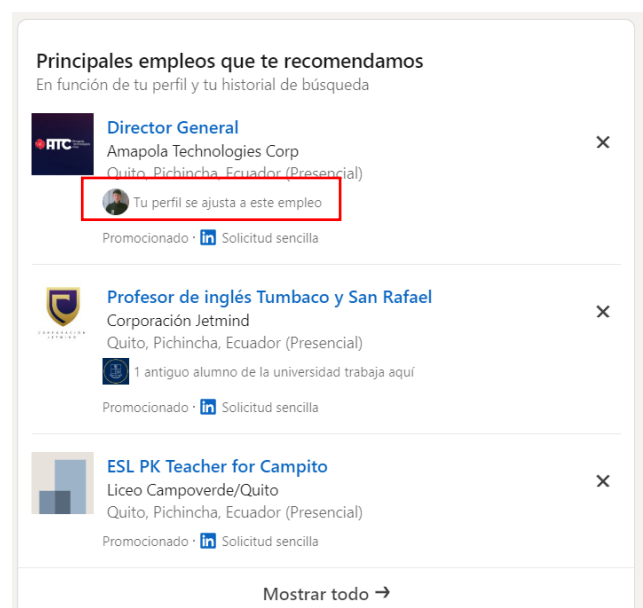

On the left side there are buttons that take you to see the followers of the page and who you follow, as well as Events of which you are a part, as well as news.

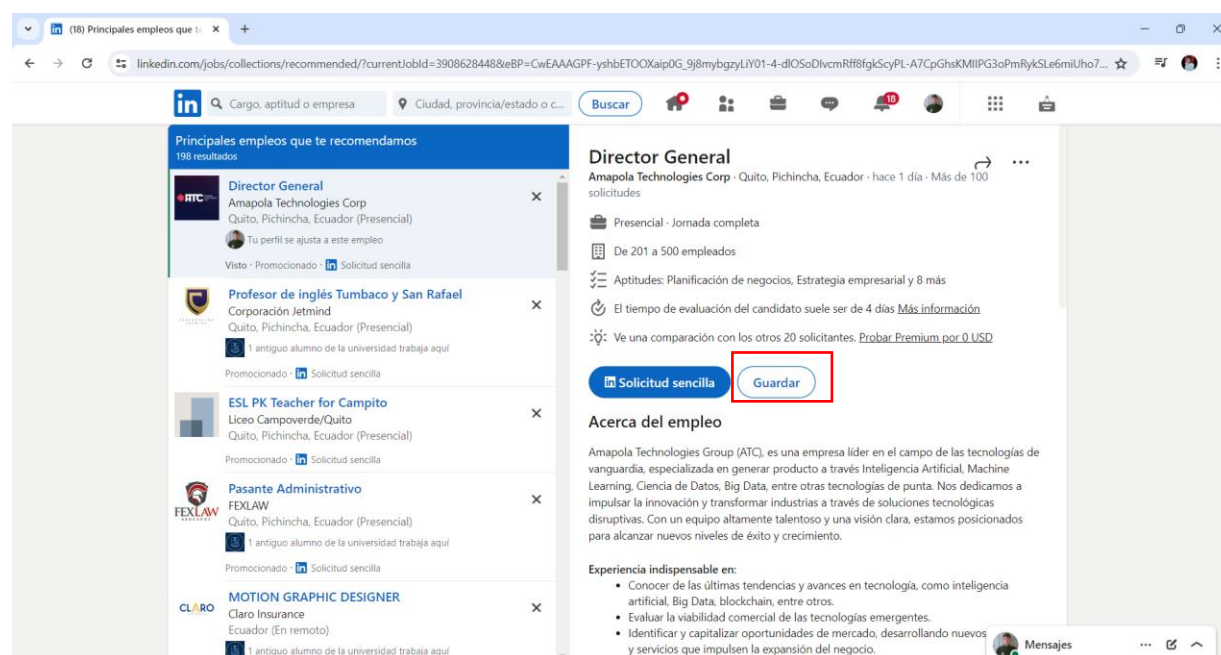

Jobs on LinkedIn (5th Video)

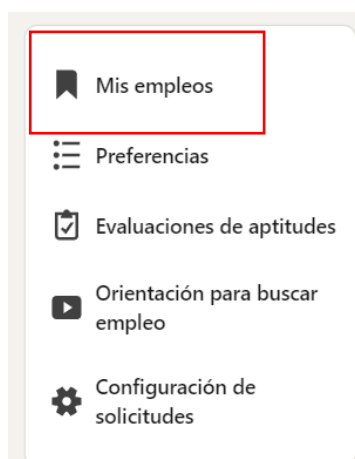

LinkedIn allows and offers the opportunity to explore and apply for a wide range of jobs and career opportunities. Based on how your profile is pre-populated with interests and work experience, LinkedIn offers suggestions for jobs in those areas for which you can apply.

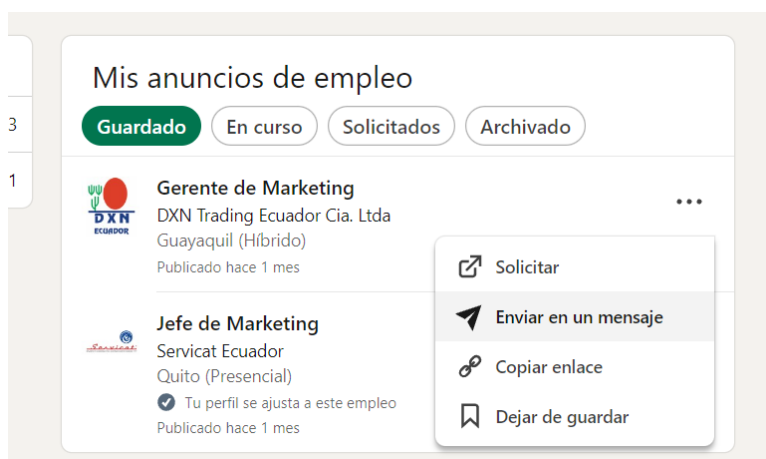

When you enter a job to see what it is or what it offers and you want to save it to review it later, click “Save.”

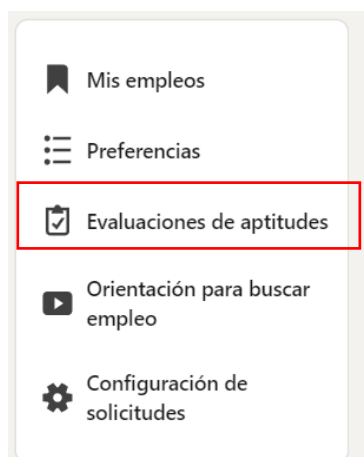

To see the jobs that have been saved, click on “My jobs”.

When you press the three dots on a job, you can apply for that job, send a message to that company or person who posted it, copy the link to send it to another direct person, or simply delete it from your saved favorite jobs.

On LinkedIn you can also perform an aptitude assessment and it will return a rating, this will be visible on the profile and recruiters will be able to use it as a parameter to accept a job.

In addition, LinkedIn offers a series of videos that serve to learn more about how to use LinkedIn to make the most of it and thus amplify your job opportunities and expand your network of professional contacts.

How to send a direct message to one or more people on LinkedIn? (7th Video)

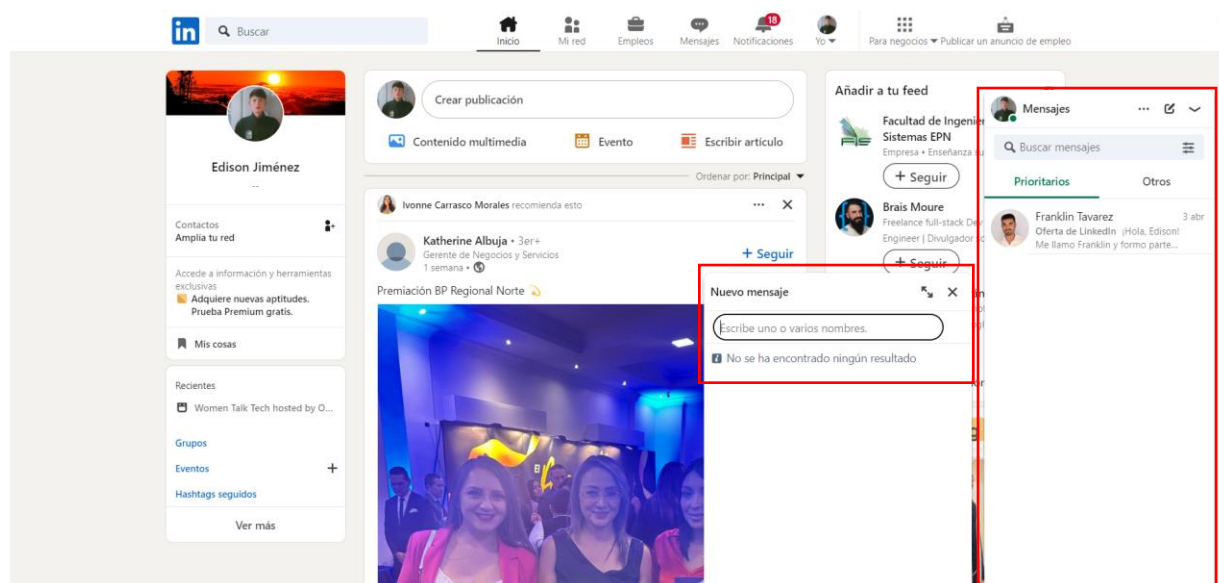

LinkedIn has a general tab for messages, it looks like an inbox in which you can filter received messages as “Unread”, “Priority”, from the contacts you have added, among other aspects.

On LinkedIn, as well as on other social networks, you can send one person separately or send the same message to two, three or many more people at the same time. This is done by writing the names of the people you want. send the message and then down the message.

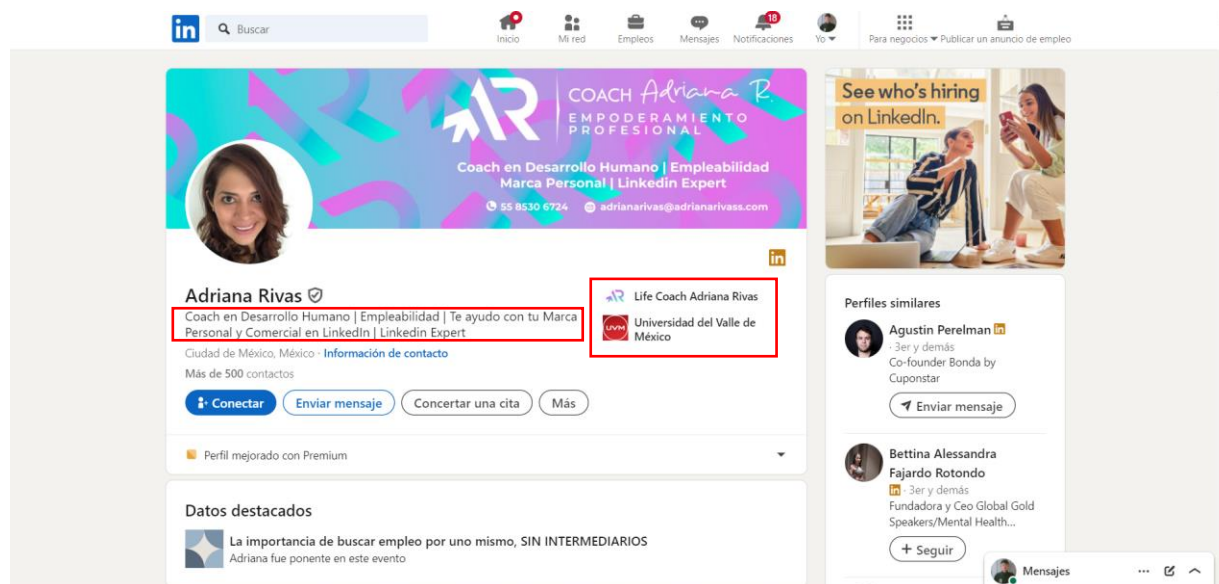

If you want to be in another tab carrying out any activity, but you want to keep an eye on the messages, you can do it, when you are in any tab there is a shortcut at the bottom right in the same way as on Facebook that shows and allows you to send messages, for example, below while on the Home screen.

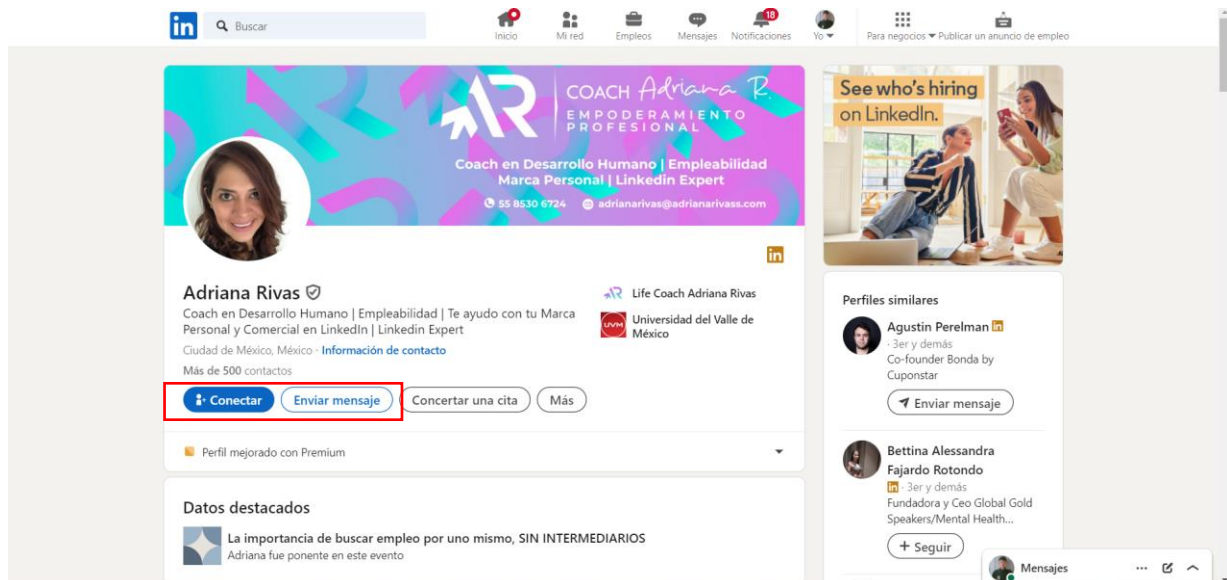

Look at a professional profile as an example (8th Video)

For this we will use as an example the profile of “Adriana Rivas”, it is observed that her profile photo and cover are appropriate since they are professionals and show important information about her, she included the work fields in which she can work or has worked as “Coach in Human Development”, “Employability”, “LinkedIn Expert”, etc. Also, her location and her education (Universidad del Valle de México).

You can connect with this person by clicking Connect or sending them a direct message without having to add them as a contact.

In “About” you can see a paragraph that summarizes your entire work life, it is well written and covers every professional aspect, as well as things and achievements you have achieved, this is very important to include in a professional profile on LinkedIn.

Effective use of search functions (9th Video)

On LinkedIn to search for people, companies or jobs, there are techniques to obtain a better result and thus reduce the time spent finding something. To search for people, there are many filters to reduce the number of answers to the most approximate ones, for example, if you are searching for Luis Simoes.

At the top there are simple filters to indicate whether you want to search for a person, publication, group, job, etc.

Since you want to search for a person and want to narrow this search, you choose “All filters”. It displays a large number of filters such as the person's location, the current company in which they work, old company, educational institution, language, among other aspects.
